

The growth of cultural and academic materials available commands expansion of the physical storage of these materials. A growing collection requires designing quality-driven physical and virtual spaces, reassessment of network infrastructures, space redesign for scalability and flexibility, and evaluating as well as understanding green initiatives for future planning. This subtheme provides a discussion toward space management for libraries, archives, and museums. It includes architectural design and space planning; green and other technology considerations and provisions for future developments.